

Tiger Global Management – New York

Architect: Gensler

Client: Tiger Global Management

Completion: 2014

Tiger Global Management is moving its offices from Park Avenue to 9 West 57th Street, a tower space with a view of Central Park. The 32,000 SF project includes conference rooms, open office and private office spaces, a boardroom, fitness center, and a trading room.

Our services included conducting a review of Tiger Global Management's existing spaces at 101 Park Avenue—a combination of both private offices and open plan workstations coexisting with an enclosed trading department and conference and boardroom. We then used this information to evaluate acoustical issues and determine appropriate recommendations for the design of the new luxury spaces.

One aspect of this project was to acoustically isolate the fitness center from CEO offices above and below it on the topmost levels of the building. To achieve this, we completed an analysis of a spring-isolated concrete floor for noise and vibration control.

In collaboration with Tiger Global's design team, we provided guidelines on how to make their new office a first-class working environment including more modern technology and amenities.